DAUGHTERS OF CREATIVE SOUND is an African American women's drum and percussion ensemble. Founded in 2004, the group expresses itself through vocal, visual, and percussive avenues. Their performances speak to Spirit and speak through Spirit via instrumental and vocal music, storytelling, and movement that touch the soul. Although women and girls seem to be most inspired by and responsive to the work of DAUGHTERS, all people who witness the group's presence and energy are moved by the women's ability to entertain, inspire, uplift, and educate.

These women are storytellers, dancers, singers, and percussionists whose diversity of talents lends itself to a broad-based level of creative expression.

The group has brought joy, education, and healing to countless numbers of people who have enjoyed the "sound" and the "spirit." The women have performed all over Western NY and beyond for schools, colleges and universities, libraries, churches, community center, festivals, and more. The group has also been the highlight of family gatherings and fraternal, social, and political events.

These "women of a certain age" are known for their energy, power, and presence.

Event is free (free-will donations accepted)
